“ Haven was one of the most beautiful people I had ever known both inside and out. Haven was someone who could make the darkest days turn bright just with her smile and the good aura she brought every where she went. Haven was loving, nurturing, and generous. I never knew of her to be judge mental, I could always be myself around Haven, never having to hold back emotions or thoughts and knew she would do her best to understand whatever it was I was going through. Haven taught me what being patient meant, something she had so much of. She put up with so much negativity from people and never allowed anyone to steal her happiness. Through Haven I learned not to engage in gossip, stay true to myself and how important it is to mind your own business. Having been able to get to know Haven was a great blessing, I cherish so many great memories of her, especially ones during the holidays and our birthday. When I think of Haven I can see her in the back yard with a long handled pool net scooping the mess out of the pool that the crape myrtles would make, with her insulated cup filled with ice & Coca Cola nearby, her Virginia Slim cigarette in her mouth, her white 2 piece swimsuit on, with her super dark tan she kept year round, and her white blonde Princess Leia signature hair style, humming one of her favorite tunes to herself on a bright sunny day. That is how I picture Haven when I think of her. The world suffered a great loss when Haven passed. If Haven was ever part of your life, you know what a true blessing it really was to have known her. Haven will be missed, but her spirit will live forever.. a truly beautiful soul.
